ABSTRACT

Law is a rule or regulation that regulates society. All behavior and actions of its citizens must be based on the law itself. Positive law in Indonesia requires citizens that every action must be based on what is regulated in law, the same as Indonesian criminal law. The problem raised is how to resolve the criminal act of gecko buying and selling fraud through restorative justice at the Telanaipura Sector Police, Jambi City. What are the obstacles in resolving the criminal act of gecko buying and selling fraud through restorative justice at the Telanaipura Police Sector, Jambi City? What are the efforts to overcome obstacles in resolving the criminal act of gecko buying and selling fraud through restorative justice at the Jambi City Telanaipura Sector Police. The specification of this research is analytical descriptive research. In writing this thesis the author used the Empirical Juridical method. The material collection technique was carried out using Purposive Sampling. The resolution of the criminal act of gecko buying and selling fraud that occurred at the Jambi City Telanaipura Sector Police has been resolved through Restorative Justice. In fact, the use of criminal law in the form of imprisonment in resolving the criminal case of gecko buying and selling fraud is a very appropriate step to provide a deterrent effect on the perpetrator. In the settlement process, of course there were obstacles, including (1) encouragement (intervention) from the family to continue the fraud case to court (trial), (2) a request for material compensation (money) which was requested by the reporting party as a condition for peace (withdraw the report). Efforts were made to overcome obstacles, including (1) the Criminal Investigation Unit of the Telanaipura Sector Police conducted a dialogue with the reporting family by providing an understanding that the perpetrator of the gecko buying and selling fraud in the name of Yuslinar was a housewife who had children and no husband (left behind). then the reporting party's family must consider humanitarian reasons. (2) The Criminal Investigation Investigator of the Telanaipura Sector Police provides advice to the reporting party that the money should be paid in installments to the reporting party. The suggestion put forward is that the reporting party should consider humanitarian reasons by not forcing the requirement to replace the money directly considering the economic condition of Mrs. Yuslinar, where she is a housewife who has children and does not have a husband (she is left dead) and does not have the ability to pay directly at the request of the reporting party.
